Daniel Worth

June 24th - July 5th 2020

By writing in stone in the digital age Daniel Worth is creating a physical record of how we communicate when most communication is electronic and ephemeral.

Most letter carving in stone is of a serious nature and it is the artist's intention to go against this tradition by focusing on ways we communicate via text using acronyms and emojis. This work specifically focuses on the less serious side of modern life. Additionally, stone is used to carry messages through time.

This exhibition shows how some of these works have been distributed and "installed" outdoors during the artist's time living in the UK so a record of our digital age may be rediscovered in the future by archaeologists, giving future generations a glimpse into our culture and way of life.
